LEBANESE HOME COOKING
MOVES TO SPRINGFIELD

STORY BY AMY SCHNEIDER

TABOULI SALAD

When Chef Walid “Willie” Saleeby makes traditional Lebanese food, he’s replicating the dishes his mother and grandmother made for him in Lebanon when he was a boy. It’s not about working off a recipe, he says, but remembering all those tastes and textures — that’s what makes the best traditional meals.

“You probably remember the first dish that your mother cooked for you that you really loved,” says Saleeby, owner and head chef of Willie’s Lebanese and Northwest Cuisine in Springfield. “It’s just incredible how it impacts your taste, and the memory stays with you.”

For Saleeby, who ran Willie’s on 7th Street for 25 years until the building was sold in 2008, that sense of family and warmth is all part of making a good meal. With his friendly handshake and overflowing aura of hospitality, Saleeby makes it easy to feel welcome at Willie’s.

Traditional Lebanese music plays outside the restaurant, with a cluster of elegant tables and a fire pit for outdoor diners. Inside, Middle Eastern-style lamps and pictures of Lebanon span the walls, complementing the cozy atmosphere decorated in purples, dark reds and yellows. The restaurant opened last month, and since then, it’s hosted visitors from Eugene and Springfield alike, some who remember Saleeby from his past restaurant ventures.

“We wanted to make it fun, and so far it has been,” Saleeby says. “And when people see these familiar faces here, they get really excited about it. It’s like coming home.”

Saleeby brought all the favorites from his previous menus — steak Diane, fresh seafood and lamb — and added traditional Lebanese fare, including appetizers called mazza and a few dishes that he hopes will broaden the palate of those interested in new experiences. “I love to see people try something different,” he says.

But most guests will be acquainted with dishes on the lunch menu, like the shish tawook plate, a delicious combination including a tangy chicken kabob with rice, chewy pita bread and fresh salad with a garlicky dressing.

That’s the atmosphere Saleeby and manager Moses Kimbell want to create: a menu that provides both familiar and novel foods. Already, Saleeby says, he is winning people over by getting them to see food in a new way. “For some reason, the majority of people don’t like cauliflower, but they haven’t tried the way we have it here,” Saleeby says. “We say, ‘Just take one bite of it,’ and they love it.”

“So few people have had fried cauliflower,” Kimbell says, “but it is amazing.”

Saleeby says that fresh ingredients are key to making authentic Lebanese food. All his ingredients are locally sourced, including fresh-squeezed juices for making cocktails at the bar. His menu includes a selection of vegetarian, vegan and gluten-free items, all made from scratch.

But Willie’s has more than just the best produce — it has heart as well. Saleeby tells his cooks to imagine that they’re making a meal for their own family. “I want them to put their heart and soul into it,” Saleeby says. “Don’t just throw something on the plate. And that’s what makes the difference.” ■

Willie’s is open for lunch 11:30 am to 2 pm Monday through Friday, for dinner 5 to 9 pm Monday through Thursday and 5 to 10 pm Friday and Saturday, and the bar is open 11:30 am to 9 pm, at 400 International Way in Springfield.

MAKING HEALTHY DELICIOUS

VEGAN FOOD GOES HAWAIIAN, CART-STYLE BY SHANNON FINNELL

Eating healthy as a taste snob can be a chore. But not at Tru Veg.

Crystal DuBoyce and Brian Igarta, and their 12-year-old daughter Skye, serve up plant-based foods packed with both flavor and nutrition from a tiny white trailer in the parking lot of an automotive business on Chambers Street. They've divided the menu at Tru Veg in two: cooked vegan food and raw, or living, food.

"We like to offer our customers good, wholesome, healthful plant-based food because we like to eat it ourselves," DuBoyce says. "We know what it does for our health, and we know what it does for other people as well." The couple's Hawaiian roots inspired the menu, and they say their heritage does, too: Igarta is of Portuguese, Puerto Rican, Hawaiian, Chinese and Filipino descent, and DuBoyce is of Korean, Japanese, French and Irish descent — a lot of cooking styles to pull from.

Tru Veg stays away from soy, and it's friendly to the gluten-free, as well. It's about 95 percent organic and strives to buy food that's grown locally. Its cooked vegan food includes meals such as the Thai coconut curry: a medley of carrot, onion, potato, broccoli cauliflower, bell pepper and cabbage in a creamy but mildly spicy coconut curry sauce served over brown basmati rice. The rice, beans and greens bowl contains brown rice, seasoned black beans and steamed kale with home-cooked garlic-cashew sauce.

The living food section starts with the live burger and the live tacos, which use lettuce leaves instead of shells and buns. The live burger is a patty made from carrot pulp and flax and sunflower seeds. Its ketchup, made from sun-dried tomatoes, bursts forth with flavor.

"I don't feel like our menu is big enough," DuBoyce says, laughing. "There's so much more we could do, but being in a food trailer we're limited in what we can serve, especially since we're just getting started. We're still kind of taking it slow and easy."

Slow and easy might be true, but the Tru Veg philosophy begins with taking care of the customer through nutrition. The mind, body and spirit are all connected, DuBoyce says, and enjoying fresh, healthy food spreads to the other aspects of our lives. "If we are fed well, we are able to perform well and live our lives well and be happy." ■

Tru Veg is open 11 am to 7 pm Monday through Thursday and 11 am to 5 pm Friday, at 780 Chambers St. Check its Facebook page at wky.ws/1hr for closures due to catering and other events, plus announcements of cooking workshops.

CHOW DOWN(TOWN) SPRINGFIELD

NOVEL SANDWICHES MAKE THE LOCAL GASTRONOMIC RENAISSANCE EVEN TASTIER

Mitchel Hescheles' grandfather woke every morning at 2:30, tending his farm before heading to work at a factory. After retiring, he refused to get out of bed before 11:11 am. Hescheles is unclear why his granddad picked such an arbitrary time, but he decided to pay homage to his hardworking grandpa when opening Chow, his new restaurant on South A Street in downtown Springfield.

Chow opens daily at 11:11 am. Hescheles calls Chow a gastropub: "Taking pub food to the next level," Hescheles says. And Chow certainly delivers, offering interesting twists on classic sandwiches like The Club (lemon-poached chicken, Coke-boiled ham, brown sugar bacon, cheddar, Swiss, tomato compote, crisp lettuce and arugula, smeared with "piggy" mayo) and burgers like the Altman (blue cheese pesto, Swiss, fresh spinach and onion jam).

Hescheles has his meat ground fresh daily and makes his own buns. Chow's burgers shouldn't need ketchup, Hescheles says. The house-made sauces should be enough. Hescheles believes when you eat an organic roll you should know it. "It's a visceral experience," he says.

Hescheles had many detours on the road to opening Chow. He attended culinary school out of high school and ran a restaurant in downtown Springfield for a few years "at the height of the meth problem," Hescheles says. After riding out the lease on his first establishment, Hescheles cut his losses and joined the Army at the age of 35 — tempted by the generous signing bonus. "It's about life experiences," Hescheles explains.

After returning from service, Hescheles decided that the time was right to try again. Downtown Eugene and Springfield are undergoing an urban culture and small business renaissance, and food is a big part of it. Hescheles felt that if downtown Springfield is now worth a business investment like Plank Town Brewing Company, he'd give his dream of being a restaurateur another go.

One of Chow's most popular sandwiches is The B.A.B. (brie, grated Granny Smith apple, brown sugar bacon and Swiss on grilled bread). The sandwich comes with fries — choice of truffle and sea salt, garlic and Parmesan, Cajun or house-seasoned.

But The B.A.B. — served with truffle fries and a pint of amber from Eugene-based Claim 52 Brewery — is crispy, gooey, sweet, tart and ridiculously good. If this is the taste of new Springfield gastronomy, the downtown renaissance is going to deliver a duomo's worth of great tastes. ■

Chow is open for lunch 11:11 am to 2:30 pm Monday through Sunday, for dinner 5 to 8 pm Sunday through Thursday and 5 to 9 pm Friday and Saturday, at 471 S A St. in Springfield, 653-9193. Moe's (next door), which features Chow's full menu, is open from 11:11 am to 11 pm Sunday through Thursday and 11:11 am to midnight Friday and Saturday,

CHEF GABRIEL
GIL PUTS THE
A DISH

SOUBISE OPENS THE DOOR TO MODERNIST CUISINE

STORY BY VANESSA SALVIA • PHOTOS BY TODD COOPER

Securing a seat at certain times was nearly a sport at chef Gabriel Gil and restaurateur Cory Stamp's first restaurant incarnation in Eugene, the Rabbit Bistro and Bar. The space was tiny and Chef Gil's creativity was stunted by a lack of storage space, famously leading to a "no substitutions" clause on the menu. And that "no ketchup" thing? "That truly was because I forgot to order ketchup," Gil says, laughing.

The Rabbit was not set up to be functional for an inventive chef like Gil. "It was designed to do burritos," he says. "We kind of inherited it. It wasn't designed to do what we were doing." Originally, Gil was planning on merely consulting on the Rabbit's menu, not cheffing, but one thing led to another, and soon he took the culinary helm. With Gil steering, the Rabbit evolved, and it ended its run a far cry from the French bistro that was originally envisioned.

At Soubise, however, none of that is a concern. The space is large and comfortable, lit by a wall of floor-to-ceiling windows fronting Broadway, and the kitchen alone is nearly the size of Gil's entire former restaurant. It is housed in the renovated Broadway Commerce Center and features terrazzo floors and a bar made from Oregon white oak salvaged from the historic building. The menu's bounty is locally sourced, and so is the art, by local metal sculptor Jud Turner, and the low tables are designed and built by Urban Lumber. "It feels modern but not cold," Gil says. "And it speaks of where we are. Whatever we do, it's a bit edgy; that's just our personality."

Gil's arms are tattooed, and his wrists are burned; the latter is a sign of a hands-on chef. He's inspired by his kitchen, which he designed, and is "actually a functional space," he says. But also, the former limits of food genre are gone. "I've studied with my share of French chefs and that's the cuisine I feel really comfortable with. The Rabbit was 'modern French cuisine,' but here I can experiment with different flavors and don't have to keep it French. It gives me a lot more room to play around."

Soubise is the name for a classic French sauce. Made with onions and thickened with rice, the sauce fell out of favor in the '70s, as chefs turned to rich reductions and other sauces. But modern techniques allow soubise to be thickened without rice, through the use of "molecular" agents such as hydrocolloids. "The name made sense to me," Gil says. "It's the old and the new ... a new technique but rooted in an old way of cooking."

Gil builds on his former boundary-pushing cuisine with more complex flavors, a full brunch, lunch and dinner menu and molecular gastronomy tricks — everything from French cheese served with chamomile broth and roasted strawberry to sea scallops with bok choy and blackened banana, to grilled octopus with smoked pork fluid gel. Dinner, for example, might begin with a progression of farm vegetables in different textures and preparations or a beer-braised Dungeness crab with milky bubbles. "I like to experiment with different flavors and different textures and put things together that people might not normally think to put together," he says, pausing. "But it's not done gratuitously. I think about food logically, and things that seem logical to me don't always seem logical to other people." Gil laments that there is so much bounty in the valley, yet most menus offer the Northwest's delicious ingredients done "in the same old tired way." You won't find tired produce at Soubise.

Between the food, the service, the craft cocktails and the wine list, which spans some 100 offerings at three different price points, Soubise is fine dining Eugene-style, an affordable luxury whether you're in the flip-flop crowd or a card-carrying foodie.

There's a sense of innovation and adventure on each plate, and don't feel bad asking the server what a certain ingredient actually is. (Hen of the woods? It's a mushroom.) Interaction with the staff is encouraged, and Gil says they are open to substitutions. "We'll work with you," he says. And even ketchup is A-OK, if that's what you want. ■

Soubise is open 11 am to 10 pm Monday through Thursday, 11 am to midnight Friday, 5 pm to midnight Saturday, 10 am to 10 pm Sunday, at 50 W. Broadway, 485-205-8487, www.soubiserestaurant.com.

TRADING KUNG PAO for KUNG FU

THE NEW KUNG FU BISTRO DISHES UP
AUTHENTIC CHINESE CUISINE BY NICK POUST

If you are wondering why all Chinese restaurants in Oregon don't serve an eclectic menu ranging from eggplant to frog, it's because there's only one Tony Luo. Kung Fu Bistro's chef sticks to his roots and stays away from Americanized fare.

Americans are used to a certain type of Chinese food, Luo says, but Kung Fu Bistro introduces you to the real thing. That means a menu of 100 entrees featuring frog, eggplant and fish, as well as staples like chicken, pork, beef and shrimp. And as the frog dish indicates, some of the meals are far from ordinary Americanized Chinese.

Co-owners Luo and Candy Duan, his wife, both graduated from the Sichuan Institute of High Cuisine in the Longquanyi District of Chengdu, China, and moved to Los Angeles in 2005. What they found upon their arrival in the U.S. was a disappointing state of Chinese cuisine. That's where what he learned in Sichuan comes in. "America's twice-cooked pork, kung pao chicken, etc., is completely different from what we eat in China," he says. "That is why I want Sichuan food spread out and let people know what real Chinese food is."

And real Chinese food includes a lot of chili pepper, which is an integral reason why Luo and his wife came to Eugene, of all places, after seven years in LA. "Eugene is rainy throughout the year, and Sichuan's weather is very similar, so chili pepper can make people feel comfortable," he says. "According to the theory of Chinese medicine, chili can fend off the cold and dampness."

Even if you stay away from the heat of chili peppers, no matter what you settle on you won't go home hungry. Entrees range from $12 to $14, but one is comfortably enough for two people. You get quite the bang for your buck — in quantity, quality and authenticity. ■

Kung Fu Bistro is open 11 am to 9:30 pm Monday and 11 am to 9:30 pm Wednesday through Sunday, at 2560 Willamette St., 968-9256.

KOPI-O'S CUISINE MELTS A WORLD OF FLAVORS

While Kopi-O is the first restaurant that Azam Ismail has ever owned, chances are that you have enjoyed some of his creations before. “My dad was a chef at Ring of Fire, Adam’s Sustainable Table and Lucky Noodle,” his son Aaron Ismail says. “This is a dream he has always had, and we’ve always wanted to make it happen for him.”

The newly opened Malaysian restaurant prides itself on being a unique dining experience, as Malaysian food is an underrepresented cuisine in Eugene. Intersecting elements of Indian, Chinese and Thai cuisines mean that Malaysian food encompasses a wide variety of cultures and sensibilities, with British, Portuguese and Dutch influences also seeping in. That, Ismail says, is part of what makes Malaysian food so exciting.

“Those culinary traditions tend to merge, but also remain distinct,” he says. “So what you have is a huge variety of dishes to choose from and a huge diversity of flavors. It’s really everything under the sun.” Among the favorites are kom pum curry (a Malaysian-style chicken curry), beef rendang (slowly cooked beef with curry), satay with peanut sauce and laksa (noodle soup with a coconut milk broth).

In addition to the modestly priced offerings — most of the dishes are under $10 — and the quality of the food relative to the price, diners will be intrigued by the fact that the menu will morph, which makes sense considering the cuisine’s penchant for variety. “Whether it’s seasonal or market-inspired specials, I expect us to [change the menu periodically],” Ismail says. “We want to remain true to the Malaysian palate and be authentic, but we’re still pulling from a number of different countries and even Western techniques sometimes. My dad is pretty creative, so we’re always evolving.”

The restaurant is named for a traditional coffee that is served in Malaysia and Singapore, and it is inspired by kopitiam, or coffee shops. They’re not like your neighborhood Starbucks. “Kopitiam are somewhere in between a diner and a pub, in a Western sense,” Ismail says. “It’s a place where people meet, hang out, relax and find their favorite dish, but the lines are blurred a bit in terms of what you can eat because there are so many options that constitute Malaysian food.”

Ismail envisions Kopi-O becoming a deep-seated part of the fabric of Eugene’s food community. “We want our neighborhood restaurant to be comfortable and casual, but we also want to show that the food can be really exciting and that the dining experience can be really special,” he says. “Our goal is to expand people’s palates and have them try some new and unique flavors.” ■

Kopi-O is open 11:30 am to 9 pm Tuesday through Sunday at 1530 Willamette St., 458-205-8356.

BIERAMISU

LADYFINGERS:

6 eggs, separated
1 cup white sugar
1 1/3 cups plus 2 tbsp all-purpose flour
1 tsp baking powder

Preheat oven to 400 degrees F.

Beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Slowly add 3 tablespoons of sugar and continue to beat until stiff.

In another bowl, beat egg yolks and remaining sugar until thick. Sift flour and baking powder together. Fold half of the egg whites into the egg yolk mixture. Fold in flour, followed by the remaining egg whites. Using a pastry bag, pipe out fingers onto a parchment-lined baking sheet. Bake 8 minutes. If desired, these can be made ahead of time.

BEER SIMPLE SYRUP:

22-ounce beer of your choice, such as Oakshire Overcast Espresso Stout
1 1/3 cups white sugar

Bring almost to a boil, and then simmer 10 minutes. Put in a bowl and chill.

MASCARPONE FILLING:

12 egg yolks
2 2/3 cups white sugar

2 cups Mascarpone Fresca
3 cups heavy whipping cream

In a double boiler, combine egg yolks and sugar. Reduce heat to low and stir constantly for 10 minutes. Remove from heat and beat mixture until thick.

Add mascarpone to egg yolks.

In a separate bowl, whip cream to stiff peaks and fold into yolks. It is best to chill this mixture for at least two hours before assembling.

PUTTING IT ALL TOGETHER:

Soak ladyfingers for 5 seconds in beer syrup.

Pipe mascarpone filling on top. Add a second soaked ladyfinger and repeat.

Sprinkle with coca and top with chocolate shavings.

You could also line a casserole dish with the soaked fingers and divide the filling between the two layers.

The Bier Stein is open 11 am to midnight Monday through Saturday and noon to 10 pm Sunday at 1591 Willamette St.; 485-2437.

CARAMELIZED ONION AND GOAT CHEESE SPREAD

FROM THE CANNERY

Michael Wares, formerly executive chef at the Downtown Athletic Club, and Lori Mace, his wife, are the duo behind one of Eugene's newest eateries, The Cannery. Not only will the couple utilize their preserved abundance on the menu, but as the canning season ramps up this summer, patrons will be able to purchase preserved items from a retail market inside the restaurant.

"We are really inspired by food preservation and sustainability," Chef Wares says. "Limiting waste and excess wherever we possibly could ... that's pretty much our life motto to begin with." Mace and Wares plan to pick local produce at the peak seasonal availability and preserve the bounty to be available all-year round. The restaurant is modeled after an old-fashioned public house, says Wares, and the rustic yet sophisticated décor fits. "We want a comfortable, welcoming environment for everyone, with upscale pub or tavern-type food." They have a craft cocktail menu and 20 rotating beer taps, and serve a true "honest pint" in a 22-ounce glass. Check www.theeugene-cannery.com for upcoming events, including a Saturday night open mic. — Vanessa Salvia

Serves 8

1 medium yellow or sweet onion, julienned
1 tbsp unsalted butter
1 tbsp olive oil

2 tsp kosher salt
1/4 cup dry white wine, such as chardonnay

1 lb fresh chevre (goat cheese)
1/4 cup extra virgin olive oil
1 tsp kosher salt
2 tbsp toasted pine nuts
freshly cracked black pepper, to taste

Warm the butter and olive oil in a sauté pan over medium-high heat. Add the onions and sauté, using a wooden spoon to move them about the pan. Season the onions with the kosher salt and continue cooking. The natural sugars in the onions will begin to caramelize and fond (brown bits) will begin to develop on the bottom of the pan.

Once some fond has developed on the bottom of the pan, deglaze the pan with half of the wine, being sure to use the wooden spoon to scrape the fond from the pan. Repeat this process one more time and allow the wine to nearly completely reduce out of the pan.

The onions should have a medium amber color. Allow the onions to cool, then place them in a food processor and pulse until almost smooth. Place the goat cheese, kosher salt and caramelized onion in the base of a tabletop mixer using the paddle attachment on low speed begin beating the mixture. Finish the spread by slowly adding the extra virgin olive oil with the mixer still going. Garnish with extra virgin olive oil and toasted pine nuts.

Note: This recipe can be completed without the use of a food processor or tabletop mixer; simply chop the caramelized onion by hand and hand-mix the cheese.

The Cannery is open 11 am to midnight all week at 345 E. 11th Ave.; 345-5435.

PULLED PORK STUFFED BRIOCHE WAFFLE

FROM OFF THE WAFFLE

Off the Waffle's downtown location does more than just offer a second, larger, less-crowded spot in which to enjoy their delicious waffle creations. The menu offers such items as "Frikkin' Chikkin" — fried chicken alongside a waffle — and their "Stuffers," which are delicious brioche waffles with mmm' good stuffing inside. Stuffers on the menu include veggie, smoked salmon and ham and cheese. The Pulled Pork Stuffed Waffle is so new it hasn't yet made it onto the printed menu, but it's available as the daily special (downtown only). It will eventually be served with either fries or a salad.

The downtown location has been open for six months. It is now offering online ordering and Omer Orian hopes to implement delivery soon. "There's much more space here, much shorter wait time," he says. "You can always get a seat." Orian, who owns Off the Waffle with his brother Dave, says their dream came true when the Eugene community showed such love and support for their waffle venture, and they're doing their best to return that love and trust. "We use the best quality, organic and locally and ethically sourced ingredients that we can," he says. "We take the time to make food properly and do the right thing." — Vanessa Salvia

BRIOCHE WAFFLE:
 Google any brioche recipe, but instead of baking it in the oven, put it in your waffle iron — cast iron is always best!

SLAW:
 1/2 head of green cabbage, cut into strips
 1/8 head of purple cabbage, cut into strips (optional)
 1/2 carrot, shredded
 1 tbsp yogurt
 1 tsp olive oil
 1 drop vanilla extract
 apple cider vinegar
 lemon juice
 salt, to taste
 freshly ground black pepper, to taste

Just mix it all together and enjoy! We like it better after it sits for a day, as all the ingredients are able to hang out and get to know each other a little.

PULLED PORK:
 1 Boston butt, bone in — check out the fine selection of butts at Benedetti's in Springfield
 2 quarts chicken stock
 1 bottle white wine
 2 carrots, roughly chopped
 1 white onion, julienned into 1/2-inch strips
 2 leeks, chopped into 1/4-inch slices, hold on to the tops!
 5 sprigs of thyme
 1 orange
 6 red chili peppers
 1 head garlic, halved
 1 tsp whole coriander seed
 1/4 tsp smoked paprika
 1/4 tsp ground turmeric
 freshly ground black pepper, to taste
 sea salt, to taste

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F.

Cut most of the external fat off of the butt. Then coat the butt with plenty of salt and pepper. It's hard to overdo it.

Take some of that fat that you cut off and melt it down in a frying pan. Then, sear the butt on all sides. While this is happening, start heating the chicken stock in a pot and throw your leek tops in there for a little extra flavor. Grate orange zest into the stock, using the entire orange, and squeeze the juice in there as well.

Meanwhile, sauté your leeks, carrots, onion, garlic, chili peppers and coriander on medium-low heat for about 10 minutes. Then, toss in the thyme and sauté for another 5 minutes. Turn up the heat for a minute and then add about half of a bottle of white wine. Continue to heat until simmering and then turn off heat.

When the pork butt is seared on all sides, place it into the roasting pan of your choice. (Smaller is better. It will require less liquid to make sure it remains immersed during baking.)

Now, add all of the sautéed goodies as well as hot chicken stock (minus the leek tops) on top of the pork butt. Add turmeric and smoked paprika. Make sure that the butt is completely immersed, ideally with an extra inch or two of water at the top. Cover and place into oven for 3 hours.

After 3 hours, check if it's done by pulling on the bone. If it is done, the bone will slide right out. Otherwise, put it back in for another 30 minutes.

Off the Waffle's downtown location is open 7 am to 9 pm Sunday through Wednesday and 7 am to 3 am Thursday through Saturday at 840 Willamette St.; 654-4318.

WORD IS
Pony Express' Erin Gillifan has purchased the Friendly Street Market. The store will close in August for a remodel, and in the fall it will reopen, still as a market, but the café will be converted to a deli with meats, cheeses and sandwiches, and beer, wine and kombucha on tap for glass and growler fills. Gillifan is planning a new front patio space, with a sliding coffee window that will serve walkers and bicyclists. And in the spirit of Pony Express, they're adding grocery delivery.

Organic meals available. Sample menus available online. Some OG. No cards. $$$$.

SKILLET PORK CHOPS

FROM DECK FAMILY FARMS

Unlike many area farms, Deck Family Farms is open year-round. "We have an open gate policy," says Tenzin Botsford, the farm's hog manager. "People can come in any time and show themselves around the farm. We just ask that people not come on Sundays." No need to call ahead, though you can if you want to save a spot for the official farm tours on Friday mornings. The farm stocks fresh and frozen chicken, pork, beef and goats, with lamb and turkey available seasonally. They also produce eggs and honey and have a herd-share program for dairy cows. Apples and walnuts aren't officially managed, but are sometimes offered.

"Whenever I'm promoting pork this recipe is what I do," Botsford says. "It's super simple and allows the meat to speak for itself." Pork chops are often dried-out, unappealing things on their own, unless they're smothered with applesauce or gravy. Blame that on our parents, who convinced us that overcooking pork makes it safe. "That's just not true," Botsford says. "The key is starting with good, clean pork from a reputable source. It should be pastured, because that's a healthier animal and less likely to have diseases, and they taste better. Being out on grass flavors the meat so they taste like a pork chop; they don't taste like whatever sauce you put on them. There's so much flavor in the meat it becomes a red wine sort of a meal instead of white wine." His recipe is so simple that he recites it from memory.

"Take a pork chop, bone in or out. My favorite is a sirloin chop, a standard thickness pork chop cut an inch thick or 3/4 of an inch thick. The darker and redder the meat, is the better this recipe works. A good heritage breed raised on a pasture is going to be rich, red, robust.

"They should be totally thawed and thoroughly dried off. Allow the chops to come to room temperature. Salt and pepper both sides and smother them in olive oil. Heat up a skillet just to smoking. Drop in the chops and sear the first side for 2 to 3 minutes. It shouldn't be charred but should be nice and brown. Crusted is good.

"Flip the chops. After 30 seconds turn the heat down, until there's just barely a flame underneath. Pop it in a preheated oven or just keep it covered at low heat. Allow it to cook for 3 to 4 minutes on the second side. It depends a little bit on the thickness, if it has a bone or not, how hot your pan is. I'm cooking basically by feel, but you want to cook it like a medium rare steak. Pull it off the heat and let it sit for a minute or two, to let juices redistribute. Then serve."
